CHN provides the homecare nurses you need to scale with demand.

The Shortage of Home Health Nurses is Growing

It's keeping home care hiring managers up at night! The number of available nurses and the number of people who will need them are moving in opposite directions. The population is aging, with the number of Americans over the age of 65 projected to reach 73 million by 2030¹

More People Are Choosing Home Care

The bulk of these retirees are baby boomers, a generation of individuals noted for their independence and reluctance to surrender their youth. That's why so many of these older Americans are determined to stay in their own homes as long as possible. But they are likely to need some level of medical care. Some will only require an occasional check-in to ensure they have the resources and support they need. Others may require 24/7 home care.

There Are Fewer Nurses Than People Who Need Them

As it stands, there are simply not enough providers to meet demand. Home Health Providers report 50%-60% of recent new case referrals have been denied due to staff shortages.²

Why is home care so popular with the elderly and their families?

Recognition of the Home Care Advantage Is Increasing

Home care offers many benefits to older people and their families. One of them is enabling the growing elderly population to remain safe and independent in their own homes as long as possible.

Home Care Can:

Lower Care Costs

Home care is usually a more affordable option than expensive assisted living and nursing home care. For some, it puts off residential care for a few years. Others may never need to leave their homes with proper in-home assistance.

Be Customized as Required

Home care typically begins with an assessment of in-home conditions and resources, followed by recommendations that can improve safety, accessibility, and mobility. Care plans can be tailored to individual needs, even if companionship and safety checks are all that is required.

Reduce Stress and Worry

Family members, medical professionals or social services can be updated on the patient's mental and physical health as needed. These updates can give the family peace of mind if they don't live nearby or are already overextended with work and family obligations. Home care can also provide respite care, so those caring for their loved ones full time can enjoy an occasional break.

Maintain Health and Prevent Injury

Home care is an excellent resource for maintaining health and treating illness. Home care nurses can check that patients are taking their medication as prescribed. They can detect medical conditions and symptoms patients may conceal or ignore or provide post-op or wound care if needed. This hands-on attention can prevent their health from deteriorating due to inadequate care, avoiding unnecessary trips to the hospital.

CHN Is an Industry Leader in Home Health Staffing

Community Health Network (CHN) is the proven choice for highly qualified home healthcare professionals. We offer solutions that help employers keep up with growing demand, improve retention and provide exceptional care.

Flexibility

Community Health Network (CHN) offers home care coverage on a short-term, long-term, or per diem basis with no defined contract period required. You have complete flexibility to adapt to fluctuating demand. Can mobilize into different settings quickly with strong assessment skills and other transferable skill sets.

Experience

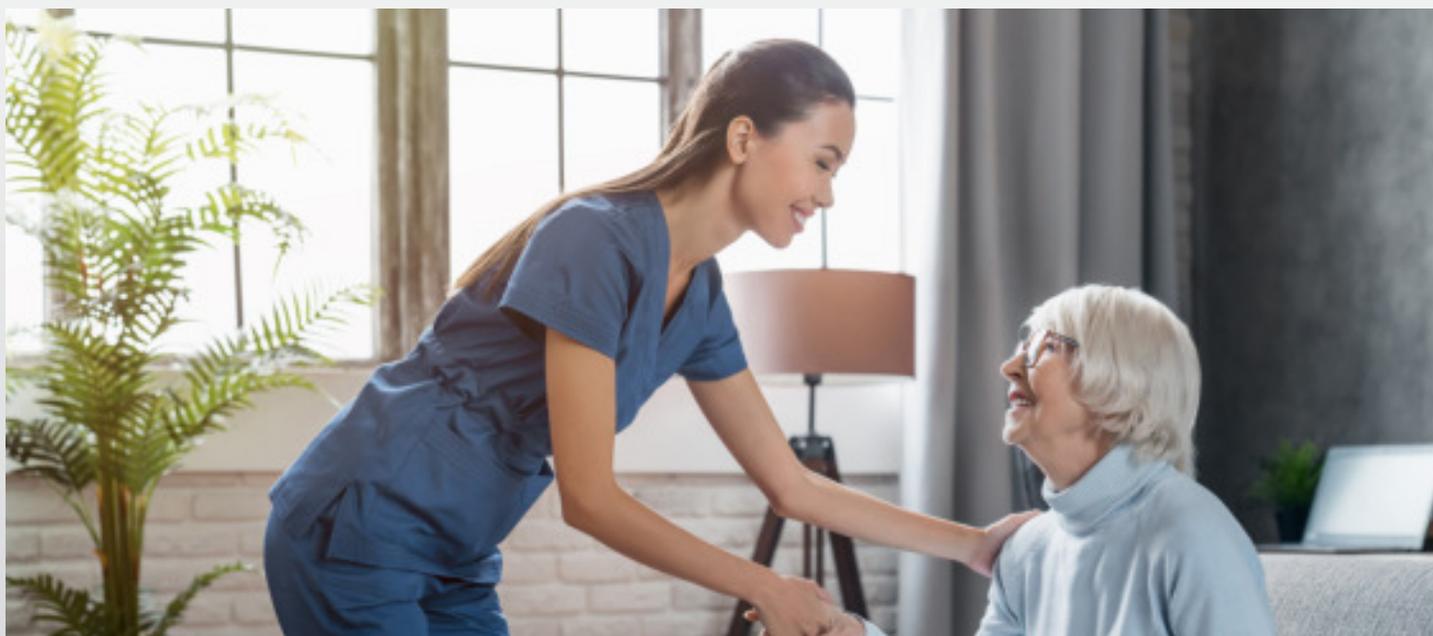

We have been in the home care business for 30 years. We know how to attract high-quality home care nurses based on our thorough vetting process and years of listening.

Expertise

We know the right questions to ask to place the right candidate in the right job. Community Health Network (CHN) can train specifically to your needs, even for specialized skills.

Reliability

The average length of tenure for a Community Health Network (CHN) nurse is 3-5 years. We keep nurses engaged and supported so they stay on the assignment as long as you need them.

CHN makes it easy to supplement your home care staff on a short-term, long-term, or per diem basis.

CHN Health Care Excels at Keeping Nurses Engaged

We know home care nursing is a tough job; it's important to identify people with the right skills and temperament.

CHN Is the Home Care Specialist

We know how to assess nurse candidates to ensure they have the skills, experience and temperament to be successful in the role.

CHN KNOWS Nurses

We ask the right questions – resulting in more accurate matches and greater retention. We offer the benefits, competitive compensation and range of opportunities nurses want.

CHN Offers Options

As well as home care, nurses can work in schools, clinics, or can be attracted to short-term assignments and customized projects such as COVID testing, vaccine administration, flu clinics, health plan member enrollment volume fluctuations, and large community or private events.

Because we don't require a signed contract period, you'll always have access to the resources you need — just when you need them.

The CHN Screening Process Delivers Results

If hiring the most experienced and skilled staff in the industry is your priority, partner with Community Health Network (CHN). Our clients rely on us when they need RNs and LPNs for home care, hospice care and case management.

Each candidate goes through an extensive screening process, including two face-to-face interviews to ensure they are the right fit. They are fully vetted — credentials verified and references checked. You can be confident the nurses we provide will represent your organization well and make a positive impact on your team.

We Make Retention a Top Priority

After carefully screening and selecting candidates, we offer opportunities and benefits to keep them satisfied with their jobs, engaged and motivated. Full-time, part-time and temporary assignments are available.
